SECOND PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH ANNUAL REPORT 2009

Jan Riggerbach is a good gardener who writes a column on gardening. She says that when she gets plants out of their containers to plant them, she inspects the soil ball. If the plant has been in place so long that the roots are circling the bottom, she becomes what people in business might call "a change agent." She jabs her finger into the bottom, she untangles roots even breaking some. Experience has taught her that this rough treatment can lead to more hardy plants.

Christians and churches can be that way. We can become settled in our ways, complacent even, which feels like stability. However, that stability can actually destabilize people and churches because they do not adapt in ways they need to in order to find new places for nourishment and growth.

Pastor's Notes Dr. George C. Anderson

Second Presbyterian Church seems to be going along as it always has. The staff remains basically the same, and our worship and educational programs hum along.

But looks can be deceiving. The church is actually going through some tremendous transitions that will be talked about on the Sunday of the Annual Meeting on January 31. Some of the transitions have been planned, and some have come suddenly. All of them, though, point to tremendous opportunities for the church... IF the congregation understands them and supports what we all need to do to move forward faithfully into the future.

Please look over this Annual Report to get a feel for how the church sits these days. And make every effort to attend church on January 31 when I will devote my sermon to explaining where the church is and what the Session envisions for the congregation in moving forward.

“The church is actually going through some tremendous transitions that will be talked about on the Sunday of the Annual Meeting on January 31.”

Expectations of Church Members

1. Be informed
2. Be involved
3. Make plans to participate in the Capital Campaign
4. Increase your pledge
5. Be Hospitable:
 - Invite people to church
 - Welcome people to church
 - Let the staff know of people interested in the church
6. Pray for the church and its witness

Christian Education Dr. Nancy M. Morris

The ministry of Christian Education is always a place where our tradition of excellence shines. It comes forth as talented individuals offer their gifts for teaching and guiding our children, youth, and adults along the journey of deepening faith.

Christian education at Second is driven by the vision and energy of our people. Just look at recent developments. Mack McGhee recalled with deep appreciation the support this congregation offered his family when his father suffered a stroke. He wanted to see those same connections among our families today. He made known his vision and the Family Life Connection is the result. Elwyn Murray was inspired by a sermon he heard from George. He wanted to create a place where business and community leaders could examine the issues of their lives in the light of their faith.

The Party of One Sunday School class is the result. What we know as The River started with similar visions of a more effective way to teach our children.

As we look toward the future, we will continue to seek new ideas and new vitality for the ministry of Christian Education. I would like to challenge every member of Second to connect with an opportunity for deepening discipleship. Those opportunities will come as we call and train talented teachers. In that light, 2010 shines. We will celebrate our first Trent Convocation for Christian Education in October as Rodger Nishioka comes to share his vision and passion for Christian faith formation.

So - what vision do you want to share?

BEQUEST IN 2009

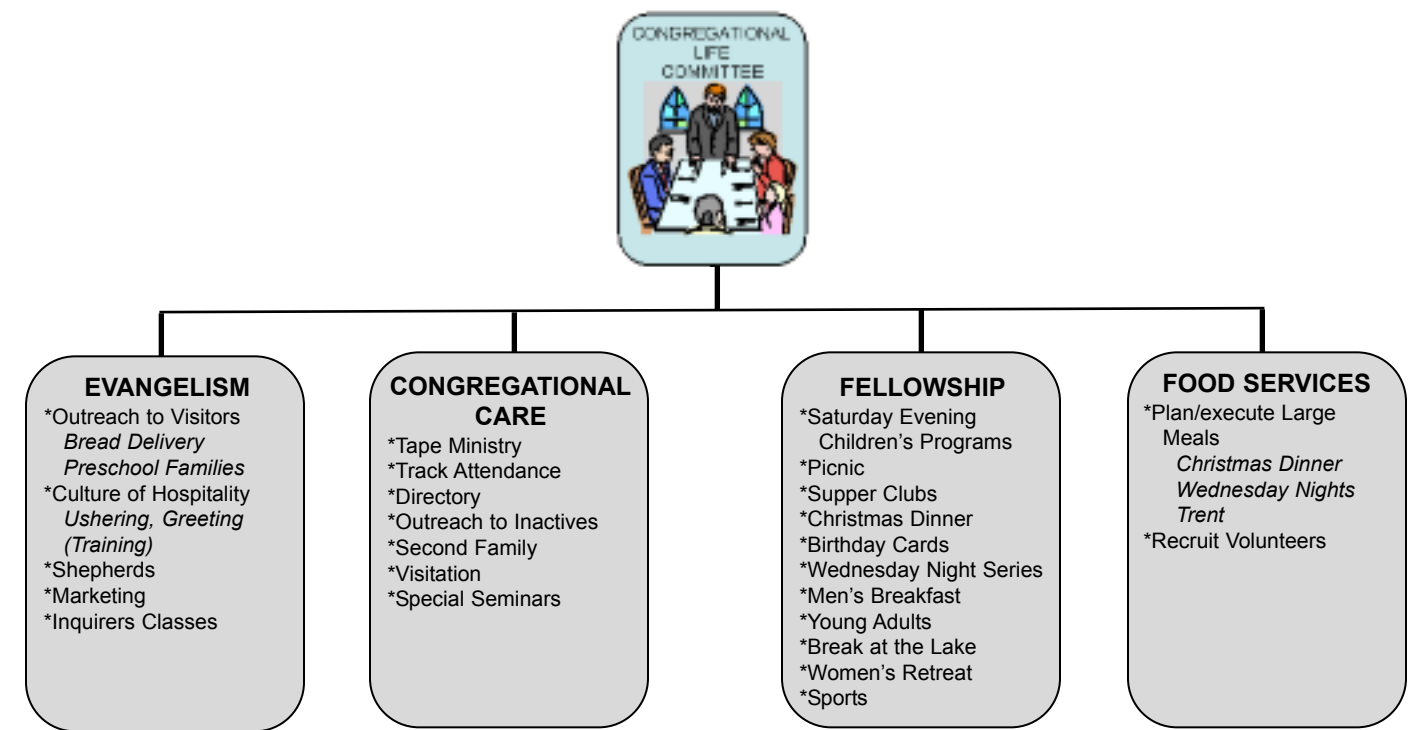

Dorothy Detwiler

Congregational Life and Service and Outreach L. Gerald Carter, CLP

For some time now, we have been contemplating how we might provide a continuum of care for our members from the time they first engage (infant Baptism or joining) until their final days. 2008 saw a Congregational Life Taskforce busy at work. 2009 saw the work of that taskforce take life in the form of a new organization for congregational care. With the help of members of the Congregational Development and Congregational Care Committees, we have come up with a new model called Congregational Life Committee by combining the two old model committees. These are the areas addressed by the reorganization: Evangelism, organized outreach to potential members and visitors; Congregational Care, programs for active and inactive members; Fellowship, social opportunities for the congregation; and Food Service, addressing the needs for larger meals. These areas will be administered by subcommittees that will handle specific needs of the congregation. All these areas will need volunteers.

The mission of the Service and Outreach Committee of Second Presbyterian Church is to engage the support of our church family to reach out and serve all of God's people through interaction with others and the allocation of benevolences. The committee continues to focus on the need to supply volunteer power to the many organizations we support with our budget.

Congregational Life and Service and Outreach are all about sharing individuals' time and talents. Being a part of the work of these committees brings rewards beyond measure as we offer ourselves to the work of the Body of Christ here at Second Presbyterian. Consider the time and talent you can provide by becoming an active volunteer.

NOTE: Although there are areas of overlap, this diagram helps to illustrate the components of Congregational Life and opportunities to serve and engage. This is the "what" of congregational life; the "how" and "who" will follow.
